Important notes

Contractor insurance

It is most important that any contractors you use have the necessary public liability and employers' liability insurance in force. Otherwise, in the event of an injury or damage to a third party property, you may be held liable.

Hot works

If any 'hot work' is involved, i.e. welding, grinding, the use of open flames or the application of heat, then the procedure for hot work permits must be followed. Details of this procedure are contained on our website www.methodistinsurance.co.uk or can be obtained from us on request.

Joint names requirements

Where a standard JCT form is used for the building contract the insurance clauses may require you to cover your existing structure (and in some circumstances any contents of such building(s)) and/or the works and site materials in joint names with the contractor.

If a standard JCT contract form is not used please contact us, as we need to fully understand the insurance elements of the contract before confirming whether we can offer insurance that meets your contractual obligations.

Terrorism

You may choose to take terrorism cover or the need for terrorism cover may be imposed upon you by contract, such as by a bank/lender or contractor (where this is the case it will be specifically noted in the building contract).

Like many UK insurers we arrange reinsurance for terrorism with Pool Reinsurance Company Limited (Pool Re), which is a member only reinsurance company specifically set up for this purpose and ultimately backed by the Government. Pool Re set certain rules around the provision of terrorism cover that all its member companies have to follow. (NB. Other forms of terrorism cover may be available from insurers who are not Pool Re members).

One of Pool Re's main rules is the "adverse selection" rule whereby any customer arranging terrorism cover cannot insure just some of their properties, they must insure all of them or none at all - although some exemptions do apply. This means that if you insure any property against terrorism (whether with us or another member insurer) you will be required to arrange terrorism insurance on all your property - including any contract works and existing structures - unless an exemption to this rule applies.

Methodist Insurance is unable to offer guidance on whether you should elect to insure against terrorism or not. You may wish to discuss this with your insurance broker/advisor, architect or the contractor at the outset of negotiations and review the contract terms relating to terrorism cover prior to entering into a building works contract, giving careful thought to your individual circumstances. Where you do choose to include terrorism cover we will be happy to provide you with a quotation (in accordance with the applicable Pool Re member rules).
